Will Make Death Trap at Okotoks Safe for Motorists

A dangerous railway crossing in the town of Okotoks which was responsible for the death of a family of five several years ago and has been described as a "death trap" will be made safe for motorists, it was announced today.

According to notice in the Canada Gazette, the Board of Railway Commissioners has agreed to contribute $1,800 toward the cost of installing an automatic bell and "wig-wag" at the crossing. The balance of the cost will be made up by the province and the Canadian Pacific Railway Company.

Officials of the C. P. R. at Calgary said the safety precautions would be installed early in the spring before the heavy seasonal automobile traffic commenced.

Alberta Horses In Demand

California Shipment Also Brings Good Returns

Prospects for sale of Alberta-bred horses appear about as bright as they have in many years, dealers informed the Herald today.

In recent weeks good farm horses for shipment east have been in demand, while pure bred animals are bringing the best prices in several years.

Top Percheron stallions, for instance, have been moving at from $750 to $850, coming three year olds are ranging around the $500 mark and coming two year olds about $350. Some sales have been made during the past week at the figures mentioned.

Two buyers who recently took carloads of ordinary farm animals east have returned to round up additional shipments and a catch has been collected for movement from Hussar. Prices for ordinary animals are around $85, which is somewhat better than at this time last year.

The recent consignment sent to California brought good prices, according to reports. One good team is stated to have sold for $375, another for $300 and others at varying figures. The price-mentioned, however, were not general but represented the top for heavy teams.

At the present time word is awaited regarding the seven carloads of horses sent across the line with the test cattle shipment. The animals were purchased around Newry, Raymond and Taber by American buyers and made up of all classes suitable for farm work.

Another sale of interest was made recently by W. J. Fulkert, Didsbury, who supplied three Kentucky five gaited saddle mares to Hon. Robert Weir for his Pincher Creek ranch.

SPORT FLASHES

CHINOOK 'SPIEL

The local bonspiel composed of twelve mixed rinks started Saturday evening, Jan. 11th. In the Grand Challenge event J. Peyton's rink, consisting of J. Peyton, skip; Lyle Milligan, 3rd; Mrs. Cook, 2nd; A. Meluch, lead; took away the honors, while the Gingles rink consisting of J. Gingle, skip; W. Gingles, 3rd; Adam Heitner, 2nd; Bertha Gingles, lead; won the second prize.

The first prize in the Merchants event was won by Mr. Marcy's rink, viz. Mr. Marcy, skip; R. Gillette, 3rd; G. Peterson, 2nd; Madeline Otto, lead. The second prize was won by W. Seeger's rink consisting of W. Seeger, skip; J. Aitken, 3rd; Marjorie Lee, 2nd; Bruce Young, lead.

The Skating Carnival held on Friday night, Jan. 10th was a great success. A number of prizes were given for races best dressed comic & etc. The broom ball game between the ladies' and married men caused much excitement, the men winning out in the end.

Mrs. Loader returned from Calgary on Tuesday morning, where she had been receiving medical attention.

Wedding Dance Held

All roads led to Rearville School on Friday evening Jan. 10th, to attend the Wedding Dance of Mr. and Mrs. Lionel Senecal, who were recently married. A good crowd attended, both young and old were seen on the floor having a good time once more. Dancing commenced around 9 o'clock and kept up until 3.30. In the morning when the folks were feeling tired and thinking it was time to go home, they found they had to face a real old fashioned blizzard.

What About Immigration?

The question of encouraging and permitting immigration to Western Canada is again looming on the horizon after a hiatus of six or seven years in the flow of new settlers to this country from Great Britain and some of the European countries.

With the agricultural and economic depression of the past few years still laying a heavy hand on the peoples of the prairie provinces and with the shadow of half a dozen years of widespread unemployment and direct relief not yet obliterated, colonization schemes, with Western Canada as one of the objectives, are being considered and launched on both sides of the Atlantic.

In the British House of Commons a motion was adopted in late December inviting the House to take prompt steps to survey the possibility of emigration within the Empire and the Under-secretary for Foreign Affairs announced the government's decision to appoint an Empire Settlement Board of eight members and its acceptance of the report of an inter-departmental committee for overseas settlements.

On this side of the ocean, public announcement was recently made of the promotion, presumably by private interests, of a colonization scheme, under which it is proposed to bring out for settlement on purchased land in Saskatchewan, one hundred families of experienced farmers from the County of Derby, England, accompanied by an intimation that this is but the precursor of a number of similar colonies.

Under this scheme, British capital, it was reported, is investing sufficient money to purchase 100 quarter sections of land at $20 an acre, farm implements, livestock and machinery to the extent of $12,500 per family. The money is to be treated as a revolving fund, for, according to press reports: "Each year they (the immigrants) will repay part of what they make from crops. At the end of five years they are supposed to have saved enough to be able to leave the colony and buy farms for themselves. The county authorities in England will make a loan equal to what has been saved so as to enable the purchase of farm and equipment. When they leave, their places will be taken by other British emigrants."

The plan, it is reported, contemplates safeguard to prevent the migrants becoming a charge on the country during their five year apprenticeship period and their activities are to be supervised.

Without taking cognizance of the possible ultimate fate of a percentage of the beneficiaries under such a project, the effect of colonization of new settlers on the welfare of established farmers, of the agricultural industry in the west and of the country, under this or any other immigration plan, at the present time and under existing conditions, is worthy of serious consideration on the part of the provincial and Dominion authorities, before sanction to such plans is given, or, in fact, to immigration generally.

It must not be forgotten that the immediate future of agriculture in the prairie provinces is somewhat doubtful with export markets for hard spring wheat contracting, with consumption tending to decline in Canada's best wheat market and with, as yet, no new markets opened up.

Thus, the farmers on the land now in the prairie provinces are more than able to take care of the existing market for their major export product and to bring in others to compete with them in this particular product does not appear to be a reasonable act.

There appears to be some hope of expanding markets for some other exportable agricultural products which can be produced on the prairies, principally livestock and livestock products, but, so far, these markets have not been sufficiently developed to warrant increased production by adventitious methods. The trend rather is in the direction of improvement in quality and assurance of regularity of supply. Until this has been achieved and markets for such products broadened because of it, it is reasonable to suppose that farmers already on the land can take care of the demand. As for other agricultural products which must be confined to local markets, everybody knows that the capacity of these markets is so limited at present, and likely to be for some time to come, that their requirements can easily be cared for without bringing in new settlers to increase production.

Until these problems are in a fair way to be solved and farmers already established in the country have had a reasonable opportunity to at least partially rehabilitate themselves and recover some of their lost ground, the wisdom of bringing in new settlers, no matter how desirable the type, is open to serious question.

Certainly the rural sections of the west cannot be expected to welcome new immigrants with open arms, and it is equally certain that the urban centres, who are busily engaged in assisting former farm residents to get back on the land or return to the countries of their origin, will look askance at any proposal to establish more new settlers from overseas.

Big Radium Shipment

Large Consignment Is Purchased By The Ontario Government

Thirty-five little wooden boxes each containing about $4,400 worth of radium from Great Bear lake were in Ontario department of health laboratories as delivery was made of the largest single shipment of radium ever produced in Canada. The boxes contained a total of 3,500 milligrams of radium, which will cost the Ontario government approximately $155,000. The supply will go to the Toronto general hospital to replace 3½ grams which have been rented from a New York firm.

Europe In Arms

Nations Of The Continent Could Muster Millions Of Soldiers

The veteran Austrian military expert, General Alex. Alexin, estimated that the leading nations of the continent of Europe could muster 35,000,000 soldiers for instant service in case of an emergency.

In a statement published in the Vienna weekly "Sunday and Monday Newspaper," General Alexin estimated forces subject to immediate call as follows: Russia, 13,000,000; Italy, 5,500,000; Germany, 6,000,000; France 5,800,000; Poland, 3,500,000. He said his country frankly took up rearmament in 1935 as the "only feasible policy for Austria," and that the nation could now muster 500,000 men if a sudden war developed.

Building Up A Fortune

Trust Fund Of Dionne Quintuplets Now $120,000.

The Dionne quintuplets will soon have enough money to retire for life if their present rate of income continues. Dr. Allan Roy, Duffin, and Judge J. A. Valin, guardians to the famous children, announced each babe was worth about $24,000 in her own right.

Between them the sisters have in a trust fund $120,000 of government bonds, amassed since the Ontario government took charge of their affairs a year ago almost to the day. If they live to three years of age, present contracts assure the quintuplets $300,000.

"It is our aim and the aim of the guardians to bring the trust fund up to the point where the interest will support them without touching the principal," said Welfare Minister Crall. "We place that amount at about $300,000 which we expect to reach in a year or a year and a half."

During the last year, about $25,000 has been spent enlarging and equipping the hospital where the quintuplets live. Pay for nurses and salaries of provincial police to patrol the place day and night comes out of the fund. Regular payments are made to the parents, while the guardians pay out nearly $1,000 monthly for the operating cost of the hospital. In all about $35,000 has been expended this year.

The babies' fortune is being built up by income from movie shorts, the feature picture "The Country Doctor," royalties on postcards, calendars, dresses, coats, bonnets and dolls.

Adventurer Is Still Going

Will Be Some Time Yet Finishing Long Hike

Jean de Vaudeuil, 68, Belgian adventurer, left his native land in 1920 to "see the world," and now is completing the final stages of the long hike. When he passed through Calgary, Alta., he said it would take four years to finish his tour of Canada and the United States.

Claiming to have tramped through every country in the world except Mexico, he stated he would visit that country next.

Although handicapped by the loss of his left arm and leg in a mine explosion in 1916, he claimed he had covered 35,711 miles on foot since he started, travelling from 15 to 30 miles each day on his artificial leg. Vaudeuil said he fought in a revolt in Palestine, in 1885, was with the British forces in South Africa in 1900 and, in 1914, joined the allied forces in the World War.

During his travels, Vaudeuil has filed 64 note books. He has the autograph of Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, Premier King and Premier Hepburn of Ontario.

Ottawa Meeting Launches Movement In Support Of Cancer Fund

A Canada-wide educational campaign will be the first step launched by the trustees of the King George V silver jubilee cancer fund, it was announced at the conclusion of a meeting of the trustees at Ottawa. In the larger centres of the Dominion, meetings of the public and of medical men will be held. Assistance in the campaign will be given by an outstanding British authority, whose name for the present the trustees withheld.

The policy as to how the fund should be carried out was discussed by the trustees and plans were adopted to ensure the greatest amount of income should accrue from the funds in hand.

Heroine Of Australia Dead

Earned Name By Rescuing Crew Of Wrecked Ship

The "Grace Darling" of Western Australia, Mrs. Grace Vernon Drake-Brockman, mother of Judge Drake-Brockman and Lady Moulde, of Adelaide, died at the age of 75. She earned her name, when as a young girl she was riding on horseback searching for cattle, she saw the sailing vessel Georgea getting pounded to pieces in the surf on the coast. She and a native boy who was with her rescued the ship's company by riding their horses into the surf and bringing people ashore. She was later awarded the Royal Humane Medal and a gold watch and chain from the British Government.

A Soviet Hollywood

Film Industry To Be Developed In Southern Russia

Hal Rosen, Hollywood cameraman who is filming Shakespeare's "As You Like It," featuring Elizabeth Bergner, will explore Russia and the Orient for film prospects on his way round the world and back home.

"The Russian government has invited me to Russia when I am through with this picture," Hal said. "Construction of a gigantic 'Soviet Hollywood' is to start early next year."

"I think there may be a great future for Russian films. In the silent days they produced some of the most beautiful I have seen."

"England to-day can produce pictures as good, on an average, as America; the equipment is bad. For instance, a picture like 'Broadway Melody of 1936' could never be turned out in England."

The new film city in Russia is to be located in the semi-tropical south. More than 9,000 people, according to B. Z. Shumskiy, chief of the Soviet cinema industry, will engage in film production. It will not be ready until the summer of 1937.

Tickets As Gifts

English Railways Had Novel Idea For Holiday Season

A new stunt to encourage railway travel and the traditional pantomimes in London marked the Christmas season in the United Kingdom.

In the industrial north and on the Clyde where business has showed marked improvement, it was one of the happiest celebrations in years.

First place among Christmas novelties must be given to the British railways which made arrangements for the sale of tickets in advance which could be sent to passengers. The companies also undertook to enclose a special Christmas greeting card devised to hold the tickets so distributed.

The schemes, for instance, enabled people living in the North of England who desired their friends in the South to visit them for the festive season, to purchase the railway tickets in advance and forward them as Christmas or New Year gifts.

Aged Doctor Learns Braille

Favorite Pastime Will Remain With Him When Sight Fails

Anticipating complete blindness, Dr. John H. Lacy, 80-year-old colorful Arizona pioneer, is learning to read Braille so that, when blindness comes he still will be able to enjoy his favorite amusement—reading. Dr. Lacy, an Army and Indian Service physician for years, and a superior court bailiff for the past 10 years, began study of the Braille system four months ago when he began to have difficulty reading, even with a powerful reading glass. He still is able to walk about the streets alone, however.

The physician went to Arizona in 1885 from Virginia. He then was a physician in the army. He later practiced privately in Arizona towns. He has been retired for 20 years.

As a boy, he learned to talk with his fingers to imitates of a school for the deaf and dumb near his home. Later, while in the army, he became an expert telegrapher.

He took his medical degree at the College of Hampton Sidney in Prince Edward County, Va., where his grandfather was president of the college 100 years ago.

Business In Vienna

Merchants In Austrian City Are Not Very Progressive

"Viennese businessmen aren't the world's most progressive. There's not one halfway decent department store in town. Many stores will sacrifice a considerable sale rather than go to the trouble of delivering. Recently the Chamber of Commerce refused to let a Woolworth open, fearing it would be prejudicial to established firms."

The Hapsburgs are drifting back: Archduke Anton, who married Ileana of Roumania; Archduke Eugene; and Archduke Karl, who is the only one to have his name in the phone book. Also in the phone book, however, is the name of a Hapsburg, at present the one most conspicuous in the public eye—one of the city's biggest laundries. "Let Hapsburg do your washing" is a line seen on billboards and in newspapers everywhere.

Highway Safety

Plea Is Made To Eliminate Loss Of Life From Motor Accidents

Premier A. N. Dymally, who has jurisdiction over New Brunswick's highways, thinks highway safety might be improved upon traffic offences when they came to court by showing them motion pictures of wrecked machines and injured people.

A plea to eliminate loss of life on the nation's highways in 1936 went out to Canadians from Hon. C. D. Howe, federal minister of railways, and ministers with jurisdiction over highways of four provinces.

Impressed with the growing toll of highway fatalities, Premier Dymally of New Brunswick; Hon. T. B. McQuesten, highways minister for Ontario; Hon. W. R. Clubb, minister of public works and labor in Manitoba; and Hon. W. A. Fallow, Alberta minister of public works, joined with Mr. Howe in messages urging highway safety.

"Recalling the federal government, the railways and municipalities had in the past quarter of century spent a total of $36,000,000 for protecting level crossings, Mr. Howe said the work must be continued and extended as the public interest required "but as the toll of death and injury in motor accidents continued to mount it becomes increasingly evident that the crux of the problem is not so much the level crossing but along the highways themselves."

FLEMING'S FOLLY

— BY —
LAWRENCE A. KEATING

SYNOPSIS

Here is an absorbing and exciting story of a fight against stubborn prejudice and a bitter personal malice—of a girl and a man battling ridicule, sabotage, bullets, and the treachery that would turn them against each other.

The story opens with Link Fleming addressing a meeting of Boone County cattlemen, called together with the object of forming an irrigation company.

Roper Kilgo, the boss of the Ravide and nearby ranges, who seemed to approve the plan, but was really opposed to it, had forced Soak Torney, a derelict mining engineer, whom Kilgo knew would be called upon to give his expert opinion in favor of the scheme, to reverse his earlier endorsement, and declare that irrigation in Boone county so far as Hamilton's plan was concerned, was only a new-fangled way to waste money.

The meeting terminates, but Buzz Hamilton and his sister, Helen, Link and Kilgo stay behind and Helen asks Fleming questions about his irrigation plan. This angers Buzz, who accuses Fleming of trying to influence his sister and, as he asserts, ruin his "spread." Buzz shoots at Fleming in an uncontrollable fit of anger, but Buster Townsend, Link's foreman, is shot in the stomach, and Fleming is uninjured. Buzz is arrested. The doctor attends Townsend and dresses his wound. Kilgo Roper suggests taking Helen to her home, but she refuses and Fleming escorts her home instead. This incident causes Roper to declare open hostility to Fleming.

Helen and Fleming form a partnership to provide irrigation for their own properties, and Roper is surprised to find Kilgo there ahead of him. Kilgo tries to induce Link to drop his scheme, but when Link refuses, gives a signal by taking off his hat, and Link is shot at from outside the house.

(Now On With The Story)

There was a short silence. "Don't know why yuh think I want yuh, Link," he complained. "Course there may be guys that do. I wouldn't go so far as to name 'em, but yuh know as well as I do, yuh ain't too popular with friends of Buzz Hamilton. Some of the guys are sore because yuh tried to trick 'em into that fool irrigation scheme that would cost sixty thousand dollars, and wouldn't be worth a nickel. Maybe some'll blame yuh for gettin' Buzz so mad he tried that shootin' in the hotel. Can't explain how folks are apt to look at a thing," he reminded ironically.

Fleming waited. Roper moved nearer. "I need more range for my cows, Link, and yuh grass looks pretty good to me. 'Specially I need more if we have trouble about that foothill order from the government. And I reckon Uncle Sam means business. Uh—yore health might suffer from a hard winter, if we'd have any guys have found out before they couldn't stand the climate here in Boone County. So I just thought I'd drop in to talk it over with yuh."

"Buyin' yuh out. Want to sell Link?" His grin had an evil, mocking glint to it.

"Willing to sell anything I have for the right price," was the prompt answer.

WHY FEAR MOTHERHOOD?

THE period of a woman's life just before her child is born need not be a time of illness and anxiety. At such a time it is essential that good health and good spirits be maintained.

The tonic effect of Dr. Pierce's Food for Mothers nourishes and strengthens the body of the expectant mother, and, of course, that it is also strengthening the child. At birth and during the first few months of life, the child is in the hands of the mother, and for women in middle life going through the "change," Dr. Pierce's Food for Mothers is the most valuable tonic. Roper rubbed his hands. "Shucks! I don't half believe that guy that shot at yuh really meant to kill yuh at all. Just sort of tossed a scare, I reckon. But yore smart to head that warmin', Link. Now about this price: I'll give yuh three thousand dollars cash for yore land, cattle, and everything on the Star Loop but yore personal stuff."

Fleming rubbed his chin thoughtfully. He rose and sauntered toward the door. Opening it with care lest another ambush's shot come whizzing through, he looked back at Kilgo.

"It would take just six times three thousand to start me considering. Now Roper, yuh can git it."

His face suffused with fire. His small, piglike eyes were frosty with longing for the opportunity to draw and send a bullet in his host's body. Remembrance of the "interference" with Helen Hamilton rankled fiercely, as did also thought of more than one previous clash between them.

"Fleming," he warned savagely, "yuh can't take this spread to hell with yuh. And that's where yuh may land if yuh don't pick Texas instead. I'm boss of this county, and I ain't lettin' yuh take my girl away from me. I want yore land and I'll get it—or break yuh. Savvy?"

"I'm offerin' three thousand dollars. How about it?"

A dry, tantalizing smile creased from the corners of Link's nose to his mouth. Roper stood sideways to him in the doorway. Suddenly his booted foot rose with speed and power that gave no chance of escape. There was a thud, a grunt, and Kilgo lurched forward and out onto the stoop. Curses burst from his fat lips, acid and searing.

Link slammed the door and leaped back. He was in the nick of time. A shot roared outside, and the nose of a lead slug burrowed into view through the oak panels. Had Fleming not sprung away he would certainly have received the bullet full in the stomach, in a wound similar to that which had laid poor Buster Townsend at death's door.

Swiftly he blew out the lamp and for several moments waited in darkness. When hoarse sobs sounded faintly outside he produced a match and struck it. The flame was cupped in his palms when someone pounded imperatively on the door.

"Hey, Link, open up!"

He lighted the lamp, then complied. It was Wavo Byrne with another waddle close behind, their faces relaxing as they saw him.

"Goah! Hear shootin' again and thought yuh were a gonner. What was it?"

"Just a little disagreement. Kind of a warning. I'm not hurt, but it may be Roper'll have to stand in his stirrups half way to town. Did yuh find that rifleman?"

"Naw"—disgustedly. "We'll go after him again."

"Afraid it's no use, boys; save yourselves the trouble. Good night!" They left the room and could be heard growling as they went toward the bunkhouse. An ironic, musing smile hovered on Fleming's lips as he strolled into the kitchen and set about preparing his belated evening meal.

"Kilgo never did have much sense of humor," he muttered, measuring coffee into the pot. "I'll bet he takes this real serious, and makes trouble. Or tries to, anyhow."

CHAPTER V.

Judge Parkhill's courtroom in the ramshackle county building at Atlas was filled with interested spectators as the trial of Buzz Hamilton for attempted murder drew to a close. Punctures whose duties were light since the end of the recent roundup struck with emphasis equally free from the activities of summer cattle-raising. Otto Pieper, who was an attorney as well as a banker, slumped in his chair and sighed. Through the high dusty windows could be seen the season's first dribbling flakes of snow.

Link sat a few feet from Buzz, who was between Sheriff Stephen and Deputy Amos Hintz. Near him Helen Hamilton posed white-faced and tense. The trial was over; Buzz had been found guilty. Silence reigned as Judge Parkhill prepared to pass sentence.

It had been with great reluctance that Fleming testified in regard to the shooting. He tried to make it appear accidental, but as the sheriff commented cryptically, "A man don't draw on another just by accident, Yore Honor." And there had been Buster Townsend's story, brought to the courtroom in writing. Buzz, he declared, tried to kill Fleming. The jury had so decided.

"Stand before the court to have sentence passed upon you, Arnold Hamilton."

Buzz rose. His thin lips twitched and his face was pale. His attitude was cringing and fearful, quite the reverse of his former aggressiveness. Judge Parkhill cleared his throat and leaned forward. He fixed stern grey eyes on the prisoner.

"The jury has found you guilty of attempting to murder Lincoln Fleming. Have yuh anything to say?"

Hamilton merely stared down at his hands.

"According to the law it is now my duty to impose sentence. It is the order of this court that you be remanded to the charge of the warden of the State Penitentiary, there to be held prisoner for three years, sentence to begin at once!"

"And when you get free, young feller," the Judge added with asperity, "I warn yuh to remember this county isn't wide open. The sheriff's duty is to maintain order. That means no careless handling of deadly weapons. Take the prisoner away!"

A waste of whispering went around the room. "Three years!" Stephen snapped disgustedly. "Say, he should 've got ten!"

"Court adjourned!"

Spectators rose and began to file out. As Hintz jerked Buzz to his feet Helen stepped to him and threw her arms around him. There was a brief, touching exchange of whispered farewells; then the sheriff gently pushed her away. A moment later Amos accompanied Buzz out of the room. He would be started for the penitentiary at once, to be gone three years.

Fleming concluded to wait outside, and took himself down the rear stairway. Pausing to build a cigarette, he heard others descend in his wake. Roper Kilgo's booming tones carried to his ears as the man sought to comfort Helen.

"Should have hid in the foothills till this was over, that's what he should have done. If Link was any kind of a friend, he would have, too. I would, yuh bet!"

"But, Roper—"

"If Link wasn't on hand to speak his piece, Buzz might 've got off. Townsend ain't gonna die—he's too tough. Why didn't Fleming just stay from the trial?"

They paused just inside while the girl donned her coat. "Helen, it looks to be like he framed this whole thing. Soak Torney may be hard on liquor, but he ain't a fool. He was primed what to say, but when he got up in front of all them men, he decided to tell the truth. He ain't showed up since. Why? Must be he's afraid something'll happen to him!"

"With that scheme spoiled, and yore Triple H the logical result to help him pay for the plan, Link figured right off he needed to get yuh change. Buzz was wise. He ain't, of course. So Link gets Buzz sore enough to draw. Townsend was warnin' handy to jump on him. Upshot is, yore runnin' the Triple H now, and Fleming will try to talk yuh into puttin' money in that dam he wants to build."

"But, Roper, he has no influence over me. I—"

"Been writin' yuh letters, ain't he? Got yuh sold on the proposition even before yuh got home. He knew I wouldn't let yuh join up on a loco scheme like that, nor Buzz. We're lookin' after yore welfare."

"To show I got yuh interest at heart," he went on impressively, "I tried to buy Link's ranch the very night yuh came home. So yuh wouldn't have him hangin' around, botherin' yuh. Offered him a high price, he. He turned it down. Can yuh beat that?"

It is somewhat ironic that if one wants now to see a piece of authentic Turkey—a typical Turkish peasant, or a veiled Turkish woman—one must look for it in Greece. For since fezzes and veils were banished from Turkey by Mustafa Kemal, Istanbul has become a cosmopolitan city and Turkish peasant indistinguishable from European.

According to a scientist the gru is dying out. Crossword enthusiasts will be wondering whether no gnu is good gnu.

"How much did you offer him? Perhaps it wasn't what the place is worth."

"That collection of buzzard meat he calls cows?" He laughed mirthlessly. "And a bunch of sandhills to feed on? I offered him twenty thousand cash. And would he take—"

Emerging through the doorway, his startled eyes found Link. "You offered me twenty thousand cash, eh, Roper? When?"

"Why—uh—" Quickly he changed his tone to a bluster. "Yuh know darn well I did!"

"That's funny. I understood you to offer me three thousand. In fact I'm positive that's what you said."

His red face deepened in hue. "Yuh claim I'm a liar, Fleming?"

"You might call it that—yes."

Helen uttered a gasp. She would have thrown herself between the two men, but with an oath Kilgo had already lashed out one box-like fist.

It struck a glancing blow to his opponent's shoulder. Link retreated, his arms raised in defense as if he was afraid. Roper waded in, sending blow after blow. "Yuh yellow-back!" he snarled. "TJ!"

Fleming braced himself. With lightning speed he shot a fist at the man who had struck it away. He left his chin exposed and received a club-like blow just under his mouth.

Exhaling air, he staggered. His shoulder jarred Helen before he brought up with a crash against the courthouse. For an instant it seemed he would be out; but somehow Kilgo closed to consciousness. And as the film of haze lifted from his eyes and he spied Link watching him, Roper shot a hand to his side—

"Hold on, Kilgo!"

Prospectors Crowd Into North

Young Men And Old Veterans Looking For Gold

Gold, the yellow-lure of the North country, which has sent thousands of men from Edmonton in the last few years, holds the 1938 northern spotlight as preparations are made for a new season.

Reports of fabulous finds, made during the 1935 season, many of which have yet to be proved by actual mining operations, are bringing prospectors from east and west, men young in the search for the precious metal and veterans who have prospected other fields in Canada and the United States.

By land, train, waterways and air-plane, they will make their way to Edmonton, the "gateway to the north." Some will make a winter start—snow-stakers; others will await the spring break-up.

The rush for fortune—hidden in the rocks of the north—means trade for the Gateway City. Thousands of dollars are spent by the gold hunters in Alberta's capital.

The discovery of gold changed an isolated trading post known as Beaver Lodge, on the north shore of Lake Athabasca, astride the Saskatchewan-Alberta boundary, to a thriving town which was named Goldfields.

From an original population of less than a dozen traders and trappers, Goldfields to-day has a community of 300 men and women, with a population density of one person each month. It is 450 miles from Edmonton by air.

Misfortune has followed some into Goldfields. Other struck it lucky. Nearly two decades ago the area was searched for the yellow metal of wealth. Tragedy ended the early search when Paul Piche, a French-Canadian trapper and prospector, took his life after an unsuccessful hunt for capital to back his venture.

To-day his cabin, abandoned years ago, is in the centre of the discovery area. Piche took a fast way out. Overlooking the field that he believed would bring his fortune, the old-time prospector prepared a box of dynamite, his last, calmly sat atop and fired the fuse.

Other districts that will attract the 1938 adventurers in the north are Fond Du Lac, in the Goldfields area; Neely Lake, and away in the far north, Great Piche, Quipost Island, and the new discovery plot, Yellow Knife River, where eastern interests, headed by Toronto men, plan an extensive search next spring.

A Peep Into The Future

Wonderful Things Are Predicted For The Next Fifty Years

Within 50 years you will breathe "pasteurized air" and probably will be able to pack your own private aeroplane under your arm like a Christmas package.

These were among predictions of what may be looked for in the next 50 years, made by A. W. Robertson, chairman of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company.

"In the next 50 years," he said in an address, "moving stairways will be common. Sidewalks also will become moving."

"When you want your auto you will pull it down with a skyhook from where it is stored or parked in an overhead apparatus. The streets will be free for travel."

"The air will be pasteurized. Air conditioning will make unbelievable advances. You probably will find it healthier to stay indoors than breathe fumes outdoors."

"Artificial light will become a counterpart of sunlight. With the equivalent of the sun produced indoors there will be no need for windows for light."

"Elevators will run at incredible speeds. Highways will be lighted almost as in the daytime."

"Leisure may become so common that you will work to escape sheer boredom."

"There may be individual flying machines, with folding wings, that you can pack under your arms."

"Tomorrow will depend more and more upon the vacuum tube to do the monotonous operations of industry. These tubes may see hear, feel, smell, taste. Last humans think of them as the developers of a robot age, it is well to remember that mechanical and electrical contrivances can act but cannot think."

Flood Losses in China

Loss Of Life And Property Reaches High Figure

China, lacking stock of the nation's flood losses during 1935, finds the money loss alone exceeds $450,000,000. The loss of human life is incalculable and is not yet ended, for many of the flooded areas are suffering from famine, and death from starvation will almost certainly total tens of thousands before spring.

Surveys show that nearly 10,000,000 acres of farm lands were ruined. The loss of human life is incalculable and is not yet ended, for many of the flooded areas are suffering from famine, and death from starvation will almost certainly total tens of thousands before spring.

The flooded areas in the Yangtze basin are draining slowly and may be expected to yield spring crops, but most of the area flooded by the Yellow river will remain under water indefinitely.

Even now nearly 4,000,000 people are in danger of starvation in this area.

Flood control experts estimate it would take $250,000,000 to overcome the annual menace, a sum far beyond anything China can raise at one time.

Look More Time

The young lieutenant had been 30 seconds late on parade and was incurring the wrath of the C.O. later in the orderly room.

"I'm exceedingly sorry, sir," he apologized, "but I woke so late there was only ten minutes to dress."

"Ten minutes," barked the Colonel. "Why, boy, I can dress comfortably in 10 minutes."

"Yes, sir," said the lieutenant, "but I wash, sir."

No Argument

Two boys appeared to be in trouble.

"Here, what is the argument?" asked an elderly gentleman.

"There's no argument, sir," replied one of the young rascals. "We are in complete agreement. Billy thinks I am not going to give him this apple—and I think the same."

Little Helps For This Week

Be not hasty in thy spirit to be angry, for anger resteth in the bosom of fools. Ecclesiastes 7:9.

Quench thou the fires of hate and strife. The wasting fever of the heart; From perils guard thy feeble life. And let our souls Thy peace impart.

When you are offended or annoyed by others do not suffer your thoughts to dwell thereon, or on anything relating to them, for all this is fuel and kindling of wrath, anger and hatred. Struggle diligently against your impatience, and strive to be gentle and amiable. In season and out of season, toward everyone however much they may vex and annoy you, and be sure God will bless your efforts.

The Union Jack

British Flag Is To Lose Its Ancient

A sensation burst upon Britain with the discovery the Imperial red of the Union Jack is to lose its ancient redness.

"The change is a result of a government order substituting other dyes for those previously used to color the red bunting, in an attempt to save money."

The British color council refused to accept the resulting tint, as red, saying it was a mere dirty brown or rusty color. The council insisted the traditional red, white and blue, pride of Britain for centuries, would become rust, white and blue.

Substitution of a synthetic dye for the brilliant, but costly cochineal hitherto used was decided upon by an inter-governmental technical co-ordinating committee; originally set up at the instance of the war department.

A Ghost Ray

Scientist Discovers Ray That Will Make Human Body Invisible

A "ghost ray" capable of rendering the human body invisible, was reported an accomplished fact with the arrival in London of Dr. Stefan Pribil, distinguished Hungarian scientist.

Dr. Pribil, it is said, stumbled on the ray by accident while experimenting with mercury vacuum lamps in his Budapest laboratory. He noticed certain objects became blurry in appearance and then faded entirely from sight when subject to rays whose exact nature he has not yet been able to determine.

Later the scientist experimented with two men. He was said to have succeeded in making them invisible for brief periods.

The European starlings are often denounced as undesirable bird aliens, but they are among the 17 kinds of birds that will eat Japanese beetles.

School Meeting

The annual meeting of the Chinook Consolidated School District was held on Saturday, Jan 11th. Owing to the extremely cold weather with a blizzard raging all day, two of the school districts were not represented. Three trustees were to have been elected but only one, viz. D. E. Bell B. A. was re-elected. Lorne Proudfoot had the blackboards covered with the financial statement.

Principal Meeres gave the report on the school which was very satisfactory.

A special meeting of the Ratepayers of Buffalo Plains and of Popular school districts will be held Saturday, Feb 1st at 2 p. m.

U. K. Offers Big Market For Poultry

(By Canadian Press)

OTTAWA, Jan. 11. — The United Kingdom offers a market for 50,000,000 pounds of Canadian poultry every year according to W. A. Brown, chief of the poultry service department of agriculture, who has arrived here after an overseas inspection trip.

"No country," Brown said "is so well equipped to supply Britain with quality poultry as Canada, because no country has progressed so far in putting up a pack of poultry based on national standards of grading and packing. Further, all poultry from the Dominion is admitted free and imports from foreign countries have to overcome a tariff barrier of six cents per pound.

Quality necessary

"But Canadian producers must send a quality product and give assurance of a continuity of supply if they want to hold the British market. The principal demand is for a well breasted, white fatted bird and though medium weights of 2-2 to 4 pounds preferred, all weights, if the quality is good, will find a ready sale. The quality must be not lower than milk fed B with a much greater percentage of milk fed A than we have been sending in the past. No other country has the right type of birds in such quantities as Canada."

Export shipments of dressed poultry have particularly active for some time. The complete figures for 1935 will show a substantial increase over 1934, when a total of 2,476,713 pounds were exported, of which 1,164,700 pounds went to the United Kingdom. In 1933 the year's shipments aggregated only 927,117 pounds.

Cloverleaf Social Credit Meeting

The monthly meeting of the Cloverleaf Social Credit group on Jan 8th, there was a good attendance.

Mr. James, M. L. A. was with us and gave an interesting talk. He also distributed a small number of booklets put out by the Department of Education. GRAIN SHIPS FROM CANADA NUMEROUS

Sudden Activity Reflects Wheat Shortage in Other Countries

By GEORGE HAMBLETON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Jan. 11. — The chartering of grain ships from Montreal for spring shipments, according to the Evening Standard was suddenly burst into activity. This revival, in sharp contrast to the dulness of recent years, is a reflection of the growing shortage of wheat other than that produced in Canada.

Antwerp, normally the principal Argentine wheat market, has been buying Canadian wheat heavily, Brazil, which normally takes the greater part of its supplies from Argentina has also begun purchases of Manitoba wheat, while Greece is another new buyer.

It is further predicted here that the United States will likely import 50,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat this season.

"At this rate," comments the Evening Standard, "the huge Canadian surplus will soon be brought down to normal, unless some at present unforeseen development occurs. The only development which is at all likely is that Russia will again come forward as an explorer on a large scale. An official announcement of the final total of the 1935 Russian crop is therefore being awaited with interest."

Unofficially it is estimated the 1935 crop in Russia was the largest of recent years.
